Focus of the month: Rise of the Iberic Peninsula market for stationary energy storage: Portugal leads the way and Spain slogs along	12
I. Spanish market awaits an imminent regulatory change to initiate the deployment of commercial utility-scale storage	12
I-1 The Spanish electricity sector	12
I-2 Utility-scale storage projects have stayed at the demonstration stage in Spain	14
I-3 Spanish ancillary services and balancing markets do not provide a solid business case for storage today despite attractive secondary reserve revenues	15
I-4 Commercial PPA may be the solution for unlocking the Spanish market for storage	17
I-5 One or several storage-favorable regulatory changes should arise within the next year	19
II. Portugal gives its green light to storage developers with an entry door in the next long-term solar auction	20
I-1 The Portuguese electricity sector	20
I-2 Utility-scale operational storage capacity remains close to zero in Portugal	21
I-3 Portuguese ancillary services and balancing markets: the secondary reserve market is currently the most lucrative service, even though regulation is not favorable	21
I-4 The next long-term solar auctions will include a storage participation option	22
I-5 Several auctions should follow, but storage still needs a regulation boost in Portugal	25
